

YOLO

JOURNAL

Photograph by John Troxell

BELL'S LOS ALAMOS

“One of the most inspiring restaurants I’ve been to in this country in a very long time is in the sleepy little town of Los Alamos, just off the highway, about two hours north of Los Angeles. The menu reads like a classic bistro—steak frites, moules frites, but with California surprises like uni and caviar that the owners’ friend dives for just off the coast and hand delivers. Everything is so good, but the big surprise is the humble egg-salad sandwich, which is the most elevated version I’ve ever had.”

Matt Hranek